Bike Rides Exhibition by Jacob Resneck

The upcoming exhibit "Bike Rides" brings together a global cast of artists to celebrate pedal power at a time when the developed world is reclaiming the ubiquitous two-wheeled wonder as a possible savior for our urban transportation woes. We refer, of course, to the trusty bicycle. As the sun sets on the auto age, the work in the show speaks to the increasing cultural relevance of the vehicle.

The end product makes for a multimedia showcase of cycles crafted by individual artists, some making a statement, others simply forging their ideal ride. Because after all, cycling is fun and deserves honoring—this exhibition aims to capture that spirit.

The man-behind-the-curtain of all this is bike advocate and former Talking Head David Byrne.
